

To Whom It May Concern:

I am writing to offer my full and unequivocal recommendation of Marlene MacIsaac as a prospective employee and/or team member. Marlene spent five weeks as the editorial intern for BCBusiness magazine in the fall of 2009, and in that capacity performed many duties – always on time, and always to the highest possible standards.

During her internship Marlene wrote many of the profiles featured in our December 2009 "Best Companies to Work for in B.C." cover package. She also did the research, interviews, transcriptions and editing of the material in our January 2010 "Resolutions" feature, in which prominent B.C. figures revealed their predictions and hopes for the coming year.

Most importantly, Marlene was an active and engaged member of the BCBusiness editorial team. She eagerly contributed ideas to our story meetings, did fact-checking for two substantial features and proofread most of the November issue; she also spent a day learning about video editing and posted content to our online property, bcbusinessonline.ca.

Throughout her internship, Marlene demonstrated a positive attitude towards her work, her co-workers and her supervisors. She was proactive in coming up with ideas and was always looking for more ways in which to contribute. I would have no hesitations in recommending Marlene for any position she might be seeking.

If you have any further questions, do not hesitate to call.

Sincerely,

Matt O'Grady, Editor
